

No	Paper	Total sentence	Extract	Coder A	Coder B	A and B	A only	B only
1	Paper 10	400	The current study identified six major problems of rural students in online education: inadequate technology, unacquainted academic atmosphere, digital disconnect, the problem of physical wellbeing, the distractions inherent with the medium, digital illiteracy.	√	√	1	0	0
2	Paper 5	511	Coder A = However, most of the pupils do not have their own mobile phones, so they have to share the device during group work. Coder B = Students can work in group to ensure that they can use smartphone because not all students have this device.	√	√	1	0	0
3	Paper 6	457	One reason may be due to children's lack of experience with digital technology.	√	-	0	1	0
4	Paper 9	502	This could also be attributed to the limited exposure teachers had in blended learning.	√	√	1	0	0
5	Paper 6	457	On one hand, they acknowledged potential benefits of our AR app; on the other hand, they appeared hesitant to try it and did not know how to leverage the use of it.	√	√	1	0	0
6	Paper 2	467	Expectancy of success did not significantly relate to students' pedagogical use of ICT in learning.	√	-	0	1	0
7	Paper 3	472	In addressing the first research question, it was shown that the total hours, types and topics of teachers' participation in ICT training all play a positive role in promoting their use of DER.	√	√	1	0	0
8	Paper 2	467	Coder A = Finally, the study revealed that students' perceived value and cost significantly influenced students' pedagogical use of technology, but the effects were very minimal. Coder B = Pedagogical use of technology associated with the students' perceived value and cost, with small effect size.	√	√	1	0	0
9	Paper 4	412	In the second scenario (the quasi-experimental study), the inferential statistical analysis indicated that students in both the experimental and control groups exhibited significant improvement on their final learning achievement tests.	√	-	0	1	0
10	Paper 2	467	The majority of the students responded that the technology improves their learning (96.5 per cent).	√	√	1	0	0
11	Paper 6	457	The explicit augmented dynamic colour cues with phonological sounds seem useful to draw children's attention to the alphabetic rules.	√	-	0	1	0
12	Paper 6	457	Hands-on actions on the physical letters make the invisible learning process visible.	√	-	0	1	0
13	Paper 3	472	Our findings indicated that school-level support for ICT training (e.g., developing ICT training plans or DER training plans for their teachers based on the school climate) could be positively correlated to teachers' DER use in rural areas in China.	√	√	1	0	0
14	Paper 6	457	The teachers' feedback suggests the importance of considering the practical use of AR apps in the rural school context.	-	√	0	0	1
15	Paper 7	481	Table 6 illustrates that the ESL pupils are prepared to carry out online discussions (m=3.64).	-	√	0	0	1
16	Paper 7	481	Coder A = Table 3 illustrates that the respondents have high technology accessibility (m=3.93). Coder B = ESL students are proficient in using a computer and internet, and they often use technology to ask questions.	√	√	1	0	0
17	Paper 7	481	The data illustrates that the ESL pupils are able to operate a computer (m=3.95), internet skills (m=3.82), frequently use (m=3.58), and ask questions (m=3.62).	√	-	0	1	0
18	Paper 1	435	A source of support that I discovered as being very valuable to the students, at least the students in one of the two mathematics courses (i.e., Justine, Peter, JD, and Norah) and one of the two science courses (i.e., Justine, Peter, Max, and Norah) were evening work sessions that they would have on a frequent basis at one of the students' homes.	√	-	0	1	0
19	Paper 1	435	Students relied on each other for a great deal of assistance.	√	√	1	0	0
20	Paper 1	435	With the exception of students who were in a course by themselves (i.e., Jasmine and Kathy), all of the students indicated that they would turn to their in-school teachers for content-based assistance.	√	√	1	0	0
21	Paper 1	435	The students' use of their e-teacher was dependent upon a number of factors	-	√	0	0	1
22	Paper 2	467	However, majority of the students used ICT to communicate with peers (64.2 per cent) through collaborative and inquiry-based learning.	-	√	0	0	1
23	Paper 2	467	However, respondents' use of ICT to support their learning varies as follows: 34.3 per cent never use ICT, whereas 20.5 per cent use ICT daily.	√	√	1	0	0
						12	7	4